Administrative History

Principals: William Taylor, D.Sc (Lond.), F.R.I.C. 1954-1959

Dr. William Davey 1960-1969

Portsmouth College of Technology was the Regional College for the Southern Region of England. It had formerly been known as the Portsmouth Municipal College.

PCT's main premises were in what are now the University of Portsmouth's Park and Anglesea Buildings. The college also took over Mercantile House (also known as Hampshire Terrace Building) which was built in 1963 as a commercial office block. By 1966, the College had further premises in Hay Street, Burnaby Road, Spring Gardens and the High Street, Old Portsmouth.

All A level and equivalent courses were transferred to Highbury Technical College in 1962.

Following the creation of the Council for National Academic Awards in 1964 the college began to offer its own degrees. It had formerly offered London degrees only.

The college grew rapidly in size between 1959 and 1966, expanding from 482 to 2520 full time students plus 2500 new post-graduate students. The growth in part-time students increased from 543 to 700.

Portsmouth College of Technology became Portsmouth Polytechnic in 1969. For records from 1969 – 1992 see PP Portsmouth Polytechnic.
